ST. LOUIS AT HOME MAGAZINE ANNOUNCES THE 2010 ARCHITECT AND DESIGNER AWARD WINNERS

ST. LOUIS, MO – October 22, 2010 – St. Louis AT HOME is pleased to announce the winners of the third annual AT HOME Architect and Designer Awards. At a reception Thursday night, October 21, AT HOME editor-in-chief Christy Marshall presented awards in 23 categories to the 35 local companies who placed in the contest. The winning work is featured in the November/December issue of St. Louis AT HOME.

Some of the year's big winners include Directions in Design, who won four awards including first place for Small Remodel, Large Remodel, and Bath, and third place for Traditional Interior Design. In addition, Jamieson Design won a total of seven awards including three first place awards and four second place awards. Jamieson Design won first place for Kitchen Greater Than 300 Square Feet, Dining Room and Master Suite, and second place for Bath, Powder Room, Home Office, and Contemporary Interior Design. Cohen Architecture Company won first place for Residential Architecture Greater Than 4,000 Square Feet, and first place for House of the Year. They also won second place for Outdoor Living Space. Chouteau Building Group won first place for Green Construction of a Home and Addition to Existing Residence. Studio Durham Architects won four awards including first and third place for Contemporary Interior Design, second place for House of the Year, and third place for Historic Residential Renovation.

Additional highlights include Gunn & Smith Architects who won first place for Traditional Interior Design and Goessling Design who won first place for Residential Swimming Pool/Spa/Water Feature and for Residential Landscape Construction. Mitchell Wall Architecture and Design won first place for Residential Architecture Less Than 4,000 Square Feet.

"AT HOME's Architect and Designer Awards is the only local contest that allows St. Louis' architects and designers to have their work reviewed by the best and biggest names in the business," says Christy Marshall, editor-in-chief of St. Louis AT HOME. "The entries this year raised the bar and showed the depth of talent in St. Louis. I congratulate all the finalists for succeeding against some very tough competition and very discerning judges."

The first, second, and third place winners of each category are named in the November/December issue of AT HOME, which was unveiled at the awards reception. The issue hits subscribers on October 25 and newsstands on October 29 and includes a twenty-one page feature on the contest including project descriptions and photographs of all the first place award-winning work. The project photographs and descriptions of the second and third place winners can be viewed at www.stlathome.com.

AT HOME received nearly 175 entries—the most ever in the history of the contest. The judges panel of the 2010 AT HOME Architect and Designer Award competition consisted of the following national design and architecture enthusiasts: Barbara Barry, world-renowned designer of interiors and furniture; Carol Bentel, award-winning architect and partner of Bentel and Bentel in New York City; Lisa Frazar, interior designer and owner of Design Frazar in New York City; Kirsten Murray, award-winning architect and partner at Olson Kundig in Seattle; Lisa Newsom/Dara Caponigro, editor-in-chief of Veranda Magazine; and Margaret Russell, then editor-in-chief of Elle Décor and now editor-in-chief of Architectural Digest.

The competition is open to all local design, architect, and landscape firms. The competition is open to both firms and individuals who have completed work in Missouri, but it is also open to entries of work completed elsewhere.
